Mrs. Carter Comes Back to the City Found Doubled Up Under the Brake to Take a Rest.

A somewhat neusual party wended its way thoroughfare slumbered in the histories of the body was pulled out from under a surface car crept furtive y about, and the tinting soulations morning. of the car bells were infrequent and drowsy. The party was headed by a donkey. So many was followed by another comedian, Sam Ryan, while on each side of him, like paniers, were there came a sudden shock that brought the for a stake of $1,000 a side and a purse Jack Levy and Frank Thayer, Mr. Murphy's car to a dead atop and partly threw it from the managers. The party prew fathued at rails. Twen v-third street. There wasn't much attention on Broadway at 3 a. M. What there fled to find a human body all doubled up under was, however, the conkey party got. Arrived the forward brake and wheels. He and Driver at the Sturtevant House, Mr. Levy went inside Brown shouled for help. and met one of the night-owl guests.

know what to do with him." "If you've got a donkey," remarked the guest with a smile, for he thought that Mr. Levy had been celebrating his own or somebody's birthday, "be can have my room at this hotel. Take him up."

It was clear that the donkey was going to be treated as a myth, so Mr. Lavy condescended to explain. "Last n gut," he said, "we four started down the Bowers to have some lun. We went here and we sauntered there. Finaily we struck Everett liail in Fourth street. There was a ball going on, and Mark Murphy thought he would like to go in. I bought four great excitement. Steve Brodie's donkey was to be raffled. It was attached to a little wagon, and was the prettlest little thing I have seen. We each took a chance—just for Tun. The raffle took tlace; twenty was the winning number, and Sain Myan drew it. The but we did."

Mr. Levy then took his friend outside to see the donkey-eite. It was suggested that he take the little creature to the fifthman Homestables. This need, and there steve frode-stables. This need in the take the take the fittle take the take the fittle take the take the fittle take. It holds out its paw to be saluted and has many endearing donkey when Mark Murphy says he shall take it out with his farce-comedy.

E. D. Price, manager of Mrs. Carter, and the members of that taily's company arrived in the city vesterday, after closing the sea on in Kansas City. Mr. Price says that Mrs. Carter is positively in a very ferries condition, and that the unusual strain to which she was subjected has aged her twonty vest. Her doctor urgad her to come to New York before this, but she pluckily octermined to fund her Kansas City encagement. "She will need several months' rest," said Mr. Price, "and she has not resided. She will open next swa-on at the Frith Avenue Thesire, and she will be a winner. With a play that was generally condemned she has won all authences this essan, and beaten away every prejudice by her art."
